GOVERNOR'S LETTER.

The next on the printed programme was an address of welcome by Governor McKinney, but the Governor was not present, and W. W. Brown read a letter from him, the stated that engagements out of the city prevented him from being present. In his letter the Governor said: "That you should rejoice on the day from which you date your freedom and celebrate it in a proper manner is right and natural. See to it that each day's proceedings are characterized by good order and dignity becoming so important a period in the history of your race and our common country that nothing may occur to mar the pleasure of the occasion or justify harsh criticism on your conduct."

The chairman stated that Mayor Ellyson was also absent, but that a letter had been received by him expressing his regrets at not being able to attend.

TAYLOR SPEARS.

In the absence of the Governor and Mayor, Rev. J. A. Taylor addressed the meeting. He said they were not called together to discuss any political points, or to nominate men to strive for the mastery of the Government, but that they met to return thanks to God to the control of the control o een the colored race and the present general continuous and the said that the present general continuous and the said that the present general continuous as a great upon the white people of the South as upon the colored race; that the country never would have prospered while the curse of slavery rested upon the land. He said that the same God who brought the negro out of American bondage brought the feet on Marsan.

"Let us abide our time, stand together, and trample on nobody, and God will make all right. The trouble with our race now is that we don't stick together. Why, we stick to anybody but ourselves. We want race pride. Nobody will ever recognize you unless you recognize yourself. How can you expect other people to respect us when we don't respect ourselves? Just behind this dark cloud which now rurrounds us is the hand of God, and soon the silver lining will be shown." Referring to the Anglo-Saxon race, he said that there was a time when Julius Cesar said their lawlessness and degradation was fearful. Now they are the grandest people on

Rev. Taylor then introduced George T. Downing, of Newport, R. I., as a man who knew President Lincoln intimately. He said that he was of Virginia blood, from old Accomate, and that when his father was a boy he had played many a day with old Henry A. Wise. He said that he knew he saw before him a party of ladies and gentlemen who knew decorum and decency as well as did the Executive. He was here, he said, to impress upon them that they owed praise, gratitude, and reverence to God rather than to man. He said that there was an object benind the proclamation; that its author said only a short while before he signed it that if it were necessary to save the Union he would free the negroes, but if their bondage would save her, why, keep them slaves. No, my friends, he said, we owe thanks to God and not to Lincoln.

H. W. GRADY SPEECHES. He declared that he wished time permit the declared that he wished the period the late Henry W. Grady, of Georgia, and Mr. Watterson, of Kentucky, as he thought they were proper subjects for remarks, and he could easily rebut several of their statehe could easily rebut several of their statements. His words were rather sarcastic during the most of his talk, but showed that his subject had been studied. He said that he might be flying in the face of the Governor's letter, but certainly not in the face of God. If we are free, my friends, he said, then we are free and should nave all the privileges of American citizens, get them as we may. He said it was not the ignorance of the black man that the people were afraid of, but that they were frightened because he was leaving ignorance behind, that the more education the black man had the more decided would be his stand, and he said the white men knew it. He entreated them to learn well the lessons of frugality and industry. He said that he believed in no dodging; that he wanted the full rights for his race.

He voted for Grover Cleveland because he thought he had the ear of the South and would do more for his race than Harrison could. He said he had always been educated to strike whomsoever struck him; that e could not live in the South, for he would e always in a row. He advised his hears to stand as men, and not to let any one imple on their rights. He advised them not feel humiliated because they descended in slaves. Your oppressors, he said, can trace their ancestry back to slaves, and their salvation lay in being rich, ligent, and united; that he found the y of the Catholics in Richmond was if fraternalization between the whites lacks.

J. M. WALDRON.

The Chair then presented Rev. J. Milton Waldron of Washington. He read closely from his manuscript, and began by stating that he wanted to place his voice of disapproval on record against the term "negro." The white man, he said, is called Angio-American and the colored man should be known by the term Afro-American. The Afro-American had much, he thought, to be thankful for, but more for which to tremble.

In speaking of the bill offered in Congress by Mr. Morgan, providing that the Government furnish transportation to the colored race back to Africa, he said that if either race were sent from this country it should be the white; that the colored man had bought the land with blood and tears, while the white man

He concluded by reminding his hearers that there would be no wrangling in the meeting, but that it was only called to express thanks to God for guiding the hand of the President when he signed the proclamation which made them free. Before taking his seat he said he thought the day on which Abraham Lincoln issued the proclamation of emancipation was the one to be annually celebrated.

This was the 22nd day of September, 1863. He gave as one reason why that day would be a good one; that the colored people would have returned from the watering places, and those who spent the winter in the South would not yet have left for the warm clime of the southland. As the speaker took his seat he said, "Music by the band."

GEORGE DOWNING.

Mr. William H. West.

Israel Allen (white), an inmate of the Eye, Ear and Throat Infirmary, 217 Governor street, died very suddenly yesterday morning, about 7 o'clock. The man was about seventy-four years of age, and lived in Shenandoah county. Coroner Taylor viewed the body soon after death, but no positive conclusion of the cause of his death could be reached, but it is probably that he died of heart diseases. The remains were taken to Shenandoah county last night.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to the following Richmond couples: John R. Bowen and Maggie Carmody, David A. Hunter and Grace Hunter Conrad, Welford L. Allen and Sarah A. Glen, William J. Parrish and Jennie M. Martin, George Brown and Mary Price (colored).

A FIRST-STREET BRIDGE.

Mr. Harvey Willson appeared before the committee on behalf of Messrs. Barton and is Lamb and others, for a tranchise to build a bridge at the end of First street, over the ravine now occupied by Bacon's Quarter branch. He stated that if the city would allow his representatives to build the bridge with the present grade, that the city would not be put to any expense; if the grade is to be raised and an abutment put at the city's limits, it would cost the city some little money.

Colonel Cutshaw stated that the location is a bluff, and that the street should be raised to the proper grade; that further than where the street now runs it should be traised to the proper grade; that further than where the street now runs it should be done by condemnation, but that Messrs, r. THE UNION LINE.

Mr. Capers inquired of Mr. G. E. Fisher why the promise in reference to the refitting of the Clay street electric line with new motors and better accommodations was not being carried out.

Mr. Fisher stated that the cars had been refitted, but there were one or two that now made a great deal of noise. He assured the committee that within the next moath the line would be thoroughly equipped.

The next question that was brought up by argument was the manner in which some of the track had been placed on stringers from Bank to Clay streets.

Colonel Cutshaw also spoke about the ruts in the Union line. The management have been called to these ruts, but they have not been filled up.

Mr. Carter asked why the cars were not lighted by electricity.
